

Peppers don't actually burn your mouth.

The burning sensation on tongue or any other body parts are simply a neurological reaction.

Capsaicin, the primary active ingredient in chillies, is detected by our body and activates an immediate response. But the cells are not suffering any significant physical harm. The body is being "tricked" into believing it is being burned by capsaicin.

 www.pmg.engineering

Source-Tasting table

Follow

We deliver End-to-End Engineering Design and Construction Management Projects in Food and Beverage Industry

PMG Engineering

Meeting Global Benchmarks

Process Engineering

Project Management

Food Safety

Automation

Mechanical & Electrical

www.pmg.engineering